
A skier triggered this slide on June 11th near Fairy Lake. They were not caught, but it was a good reminder to stay heads up on the snow all year. From message: "...Red is where I triggered it, blue and yellow are the two separate debris piles from it. Nobody was caught, I was the only one involved. It wasn't a huge slide by any means, but certainly could have run me through some cliffs and buried me."

Advisory Region
Bridger Range
Longitude
-110.96W
Latitude
45.90N
Avalanche Details: Skier triggered wet loose at Fairy Lake
Bridger Range, 2020-06-16