From obs 3/12/22: "Upon descending a ~35 degree slope, I (the snowboarder) kicked loose a wind slab that propagated 100 feet wide, 8 inch deep (max, 4 inches at edges) wind slab that traveled approximately 300 feet (entire slope over 30 degrees) before settling in 2 debris fields, each about 30’ wide and with a maximum of 2’ depth. No one was swept by the debris/buried/injured."

Advisory Region
Bridger Range
Longitude

-110.98W
Latitude
45.92N
Avalanche Details: Snowboarder triggered, un-injured, N. Bridgers
Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Sun Mar 13, 2022
Bridger Range, 2022-03-13