

Hebgen Lake

Date

Sun, 01/03/2021 - 15:00

Activity

Skiing

Skied both north and east facing terrain on the west side of Hebgen today. The few inches of new snow that has fallen recently seemed a bit denser than what was already on the ground. Made for an EXTREMELY touchy day. Widespread whumpfing and collapsing everywhere we went. We kept our slope angles low. On one slope we had a large collapse when the first skier started which created many longitudinal cracks across the entire width and length of the slope. We measured the slope at 27 degrees - I am confident a steeper slope in this area would have easily released.

Region

Southern Madison

Location (from list)

Hebgen Lake

Observer Name

Chris Pierce