Skiing

GNFAC,

Toured up Dudley Creek today, top notch skiing and deep trail breaking. There was 80-90 cm of snow on the ground down low and 130-140 above 8500'. I didn't dig, but from poking around it felt like this storm could have doubled the amount of snow on the ground, especially down low. We got 2 big whumphs on the way up. The clouds parted a few times and we spotted 5 or 6 good sized crowns on the north facing tree glades across from us, I uploaded a few photos but I'm not sure you'll be able to make them out. Winds were light with a few moderate gusts shaking the snow out of the trees onto us. It wasn't snowing there.

Yeehaw!
