

Trip to buffalo horn pass in Tom miner

Activity

Skiing

Toured from the buffalo horn pass trail head to the pass itself. I didn't go super high only a little over 8600'. I was shocked by the stability the snowpack showed however. I only had 1 collapse all day and that was at the trailhead. I wasn't getting cracking at my feet. I definitely don't trust the snowpack but it is the least reactive place I've seen yet to a fresh dump. Definitely some recent wind loading up high. I'd say a foot of new snow at the pass itself and 8" at the trailhead.
